ENGAGEMENT

Teaching through Indigenous ways, means you are adapting and collaborating to your students. Creating an engaging lesson.

2

ADAPTABILITY

Bulaarr (2)

Learning to teach in Indigenous ways means that you are also learning from Country. Caring for Country is one of our best teachers. To do this, you need to adapt, read and coincide within each and every environment you're in. This takes reflection, humility and a deep understanding of your surroundings.

3

CONFIDENCE

Gulibaa (3)

If we want true reconciliation in Australia, we need white fellas that are walking and talking with us. We want this journey to be a partnership. That is the only way forward. Learning to teach in Indigenous ways, helps educators see a unique perspective.

4

NON-LINGUISTIC REPRESENTATIONS

Buligaa (4)

Indigenous and cultural learning can be adapted from any textile, image or symbol. This method of teaching bodes well with all peoples, regardless of backgrounds. Essentially creating a learning experience that all persons can contribute to, participate in and enjoy. All whilst learning!

5

LEARNING BY YARNING

Mara (5)

In traditional Aboriginal society, social governance was determined by a persons skill and or knowledge. Everyone had a place. Everyone had a job to do. Joining this SIG will be an ongoing development and learning opportunity for all educators. We want to show you how you can incorporate Indigenous knowledges into your professional and personal lives. It is Indigenous knowledges that will save the planet. Let's secure this knowledge together and in doing so, create inclusive, engaging and culturally safe learning environments.
