

The Australian Comprehensive Cancer Network (ACCN)

The ACCN is a virtual national network that connects cancer services across Australia. It brings together cancer services, existing networks and alliances within and across states and territories to enable collaboration, sharing of expertise, and access to comprehensive cancer care for all people affected by cancer. Anchored by Comprehensive Cancer Centres (CCCs), the ACCN strives to deliver evidence-driven prevention, diagnosis, treatment, and support to all Australians affected by cancer.

Through the ACCN, health services will have the opportunity to connect with CCCs and other centres of excellence that can provide specialist knowledge, clinical expertise, and capability. This will ensure that all patients throughout Australia will have access to the highest quality care as close to home as safely possible.

The ACCN does not duplicate existing networks or alliances within and between jurisdictions that deliver cancer care or conduct cancer research and clinical trials.

Joining the Network

ACCN membership is open to:

- Comprehensive Cancer Centres
- Centres of excellence and clinical networks that provide specialist services
- Consumer representatives
- Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Services
- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Workers and practitioners
- Health care professionals
- Primary Health Networks
- Primary, community and allied health services
- Regional hospitals and remote Health services
- Medical colleges and other medical education organisations
- Academic and research institutions; Research and clinical trials groups
- Cancer-related data collecting and reporting entities.
- Cancer advocacy groups and non-government organisations.

ACCN members have access to the ACCN discussion forum to connect, collaborate, and share knowledge with other members of the Network. If you are interested in joining the ACCN, click here or scan the following QR code:

For any enquiries, please contact the ACCN secretariat at accn@canceraustralia.gov.au