

Quality of life care for people with an acquired brain injury

An acquired brain injury (ABI) represents one of the most complex and misunderstood areas of care and carries a distinct set of challenges.

Care1 has been supporting people with acquired brain injuries, and their families, for more than 15 years. It's something we specialise in, and feel deeply passionate about.

Complex conditions require special care

An ABI is a brain injury that has occurred as a result of an accident, illness or traumatic event. This injury then has an impact on the function of that area of the cerebrum, such as motor function, memory or speech.

Acquired brain injuries can occur following a variety of traumatic accidents and incidents where the brain is damaged. This can happen through physical impact or a loss of oxygen. Injuries can come from assault, falls, sporting accidents and traffic collisions. In fact, more than 70% of these injuries are the result of road accidents. Other causes include strokes, asphyxiation and tumours.

Learning to live day-to-day life again can be devastating for people with an ABI if they don't have access to the right care and support for them. That's where Care1 can help.

Since the business was established in 2006, ABI has been our key area of specialty. We have supported thousands of clients to rebuild their lives, their identities and their capability through the one-on-one care and empathetic approach of our highly-trained and experienced carers.

Care1 work hard and I learned to deal with my injuries. They helped me along the way and I am very appreciative of that.
