Anthony Downhill,
Administration and Grants teams of the United Nations Association of Australia (UNAA)

Anthony is a medical student at the University of Sydney. Born and raised in California, he moved to Australia to pursue his medical studies and has since dedicated his time to various global health and humanitarian initiatives. He currently serves with the administration and grants teams of the United Nations Association of Australia (UNAA), volunteers with Orange Sky, and is the current President of GlobalHOME, a University of Sydney society focused on global health and a member organization of the Australian Medical Students' Association (AMSA).

His interests lie in health policy advocacy, humanitarian outreach, and cross-cultural health education, both locally and internationally. Anthony aspires to specialize in Emergency Medicine and work with organizations such as the World Health Organization (WHO) and Médecins Sans Frontières.

At this United Nations event, Anthony will speak on youth-led approaches to strengthening global health systems and bringing a frontline perspective from the next generation of healthcare providers.
