

Garth Morgan
Founder and CEO
changewise

Garth Morgan is a nationally respected executive and strategist with over two decades of experience in social policy, systems reform, and Indigenous affairs. Until recently he was the CEO of QATSI CPP, Queensland's peak body for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and families and the peak body for youth justice in Queensland.

Garth is known for his ability to cut through complexity, build trust across unlikely alliances, and reimagine systems from the ground up. His work has contributed to a substantial increase in investment and autonomy for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander community-controlled organisations, helping to redefine the role of First Nations-led institutions in driving long-term, generational change.

Now leading Change Wise, a strategic advisory firm, Garth works with government, philanthropy, and the social sector to design bold policy, develop capable institutions, and make change stick. A former construction worker turned reform architect, Garth brings a sharp strategic mind, a practical edge, and an enduring belief in the potential of people and place.

He lives in Melbourne with his family and splits his time between boardrooms, community halls, and the occasional Sea of Thieves session with his son.
