INVITATION

Mental disorders now account for the leading global burden of disability. Given the importance of nutrition in supporting both brain structure and function, it seems surprising that diet and nutrition as potentially important factors in mental health have been largely unexamined until recently. However, the recent emergence of high quality clinical, experimental and epidemiological evidence has provided a tipping point for change.

The International Society for Nutritional Psychiatry Research (ISNPR) is uniquely placed at the forefront of a new global movement and paradigm shift in psychiatry. While pharmaceutical development in psychiatry has stalled, the new field of Nutritional Psychiatry is now offering immense promise for the prevention and treatment of mental disorders.

The ISNPR now comprises researchers and clinicians from across the globe, representing many of the leading academic institutions around the world. It incorporates a broad spectrum of research and clinical foci, from psychiatry, psychology, integrative medicine, and all aspects of public and health and clinical practice.

It is our pleasure to invite you to the fourth major international meeting of the International Society for Nutritional Psychiatry Research, to be held in Taipei, Taiwan between the 18th to 19th of October 2025 at the Evergreen Hotel.

The conference will comprise:

- Plenary presentations from leading international researchers
- State of the art symposia and oral presentations from researchers and clinicians
Multidisciplinary workshops for psychiatrists, psychologists, dietitians and other health professionals
- An exciting social program

This meeting will reflect the broad spectrum of research, from the sub-cellular to translation and implementation science. The program will cater to the interests of researchers and clinicians from the fields of public health, psychiatry and psychology as well as diabetes, cardiovascular disease, obesity and dietetics.

We look forward to welcoming you to Taipei for what promises to be a highly stimulating program that also offers important opportunities for networking, professional training and collaboration.

Wolfgang Marx, PhD

President, International Society for Nutritional Psychiatry Research
