Naomi Klein: Sacrifice zones

"Poor places. Out-of-the-way places. Places where residents lack political power, usually having to do with some combination of race, language and class."

"Fossil fuels require sacrifice zones: they always have. And you can't have a system built on sacrificial places and sacrificial people unless intellectual theories that justify their sacrifice exist and persist: from Manifest Destiny to Terra Nullius to Orientalism, from backward hillbillies to backward Indians."

Climate Justice

[Climate Justice] makes climate change a social issue by centering frontline communities and acknowledging power structures, while dismantling exploitative and harmful institutions in order to RESPECT LIFE.

GLOBAL CAMPAIGN TO DEMAND CLIMATE JUSTICE

The background features several watercolor-style washes in shades of light blue and teal. There are also several small, circular blue dots scattered across the white space. The text 'Questions?' is centered on the left side of the page.
