About the Sessions

Main Stage Live Events

Thriving Tomorrow: Regenerative thinking and future-proofing careers

What will set the next generation of workers apart? Rapid change demands us to be innovative and daring. Join us on the couch as our panel discuss what is important to them, lessons learned and the exciting possibilities for future-focused businesses and workers with their eye on success.

Clare Press

Clare Press is an influential advocate for sustainable fashion and ethical practices. She is a podcaster and author, and has served as the Sustainability Editor-at-Large for Vogue Australia. Through her work, Clare Press aims to inspire a responsible and informed approach to fashion.

Josh Niland

Josh Niland is an award-winning Australian chef, restaurateur and author, known for his innovative approach to seafood cuisine. Josh is the owner of Saint Peter seafood restaurant, and Fish Butchery, a specialty fish shop. He is known as a leader in sustainable seafood practices.

Changing times, emerging careers: How to stand out in workplaces of the future

The future of work is evolving, driven by demographic, social, and technological trends. Generational shifts and leadership changes are reshaping workplaces. In this session, social researcher and author Ashley Fell will outline the key trends transforming future careers. She will provide an engaging snapshot of the changing world of work to help navigate these shifts and build impactful and influential careers.

Ashley Fell

Ashley Fell is a social researcher, TEDx speaker and the Director of Advisory at McCrindle. She is the author of two books on leadership and generational insights, and brings robust, research-based content to her engaging presentations and consulting.
