

Naomi James

Naomi is a proven transformational CEO with deep commercial and operational experience in significant essential infrastructure across Australasia. Naomi has worked at CEO and C suite level for the last 15 years predominantly within the energy, resources and industrial sectors in a range of line and functional roles.

Her most recent role was CEO of Refining NZ which owned and operated New Zealand's only oil refinery and nationally significant fuel storage and distribution infrastructure. From 2020 to 2023, Naomi led the NZX-listed company through a significant transformation to become Channel Infrastructure, New Zealand's largest fuel infrastructure company and best performing stock on the NZX in 2022.

Across Naomi's career, she has led significant and complex change agendas involving multiple stakeholders, using change as a catalyst to unlock business performance and value.
