

Sarah Ritch

The Global Fund

Sarah Ritch is the Deputy Head of Investigations at the Global Fund - an international organization that invests over $4 billion a year to defeat AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria. She has served the Global Fund's Office of the Inspector General in several capacities since 2011, leading and managing multi-disciplinary teams of professionals to conduct complex and sensitive investigations concerning fraud, corruption and sexual exploitation and abuse affecting programs financed by the Global Fund.

She is currently developing an integrity risk prevention program within OIG to help the Global Fund manage and mitigate fraud risks and she leads the Investigation Unit's efforts in counter-fraud outreach and awareness raising.

She is a U.S. and British national who worked as a corporate litigator and a state prosecutor in New York prior to joining the Global Fund.
