ALEXANDRE ULKU

Data Scientist
Banque de France

Alexandre Ulku is a Data Scientist at Banque de France, working within the Monetary Policy Implementation Directorate. He contributes to market analysis and purchase programs, with a focus on modernizing analytical tools and exploring new opportunities in artificial intelligence to enhance the bank's monetary policy operations.

Alexandre began his career at Banque de France in 2019 as an apprentice in the statistics department. He later joined the IT division in 2021, where he worked on computing infrastructure for scientific research and production. Since 2024, he has held his current position, applying his technical expertise to support the bank's evolving analytical needs.

He holds a Master's degree in Engineering from the Paris Higher Institute of Electronics (ISEP), earned in 2021.
