

Simi Adejumo

The World Bank Group

Simi Adejumo is Senior Counsel with the Ethics and Internal Justice Vice Presidency at the World Bank Group (WBG) with over a decade's experience reviewing concerns of interpersonal conflict, including allegations of retaliation, harassment, and abuse of authority. At the WBG, she has led various anti-retaliation initiatives designed to entrench best practices in the addressing retaliation and creating a culture of accountability.

Before joining the WBG, she worked in global financial and consulting institutions (Citigroup and Accenture), an international law firm and a private equity fund, providing transactional, compliance, and risk management guidance.

At the WBG, she prioritizes creating an ethical environment to enable staff function optimally and, has delivered (at the WBG HQ and country offices) multiple ethics related trainings on topical institutional issues. Having lived and worked in Africa, Europe and North America, she brings a multicultural perspective to the conversation on fostering a values-based work environment.
