

PASCALIE TAPLIN

PhD Candidate, NSC

Pascale Taplin is an anthropologist with over twenty years of experience working with First Nations communities in the Northern Territory and Queensland. Pascale is a PhD Candidate and Casual Sessional Academic at the National Security College (NSC).

Her research draws on her expertise in applied anthropology to understand the intersection of disinformation and accelerationism in Australia. Pascale is a student representative on the ANU Human Research Ethics Committee.