

TUWE PAMOJA

Let's be together for equitable urban nature-based solutions for climate change adaptation

With a name that means "Let's be together" in Swahili, the aim of Tuwe Pamoja is to bring together city residents, government officials, non-governmental organisations, community groups and researchers from four African cities.

THREE THEMES

Nature-based solutions

Climate risk

Intersectionality

THREE OBJECTIVES

1

Understanding diverse lived experiences

2

Planning together for climate resilient futures

3

Sharing learning within and across city contexts

THE CHANGE WE WANT TO SEE

Together, we want to strengthen the capacities of city actors to harness locally-driven, equitable nature-based solutions for climate-resilient urban development.

Methodological and technical capacities that support city actors in generating and engaging with various sources of evidence and related uncertainties.

Relational capacities

that support city actors in collaboratively planning across sectors and scales.

Learning capacities

that support city actors in taking adaptive action along climate resilient development pathways.

Capacities for collaborative planning that allow city actors to meaningfully plan or partake in co-governance processes.

Tuwe Pamoja is led by a consortium of non-governmental and community-based organisations, research institutes and regional sub-Saharan African networks.

The diversity of skills, experience and knowledge brought by these partners benefits everyone in the team.

Because our non-governmental and community-based organisation leads are deeply embedded within local contexts, they support our academic friends in understanding grounded challenges. They also provide an understanding about the innovative quantitative and qualitative methods already being applied within informal settlements.
