Olufemi Adedoyin

Legal Counsel

U.S. Trade and Development Agency

Femi Adedoyin is an Assistant General Counsel at the U.S. Trade and Development Agency where she advises on the agency's Power Africa portfolio, focusing on energy infrastructure projects in sub-Saharan Africa.

Prior to this role, Femi also worked as the Director of Contracts and a project manager for the Global Environment & Technology Foundation. There she advised executive leadership on law and compliance matters related to U.S. government and donor funded projects as well as managed rural and peri-urban water and sanitation (WASH) projects in Nigeria, Ghana, Ethiopia and South Africa.

Femi has also advised on federal government procurement law matters at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). While there she represented HHS in litigation before the Government Accountability Office (GAO) and the Civilian Board of Contract Appeals (CBCA).

Femi holds a J.D. from the Syracuse University College of Law, an M.A. in International Relations from the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Policy (Syracuse University), and a Master's in Public Administration and B.A. in English from the University of Delaware.
