

Manufacturing NASA missions on Earth, in space, and beyond

Advanced manufacturing remains critical to NASA missions. Innovations on the ground can reduce hardware costs and development time, while in-space manufacturing efforts are changing what's possible off-Earth. As NASA prepares to land astronauts on the Moon, technology efforts underway could allow for more sustainable, flexible future missions. Hear about NASA's exploration plans and the technologies that will feed forward to other destinations and science missions.