— TARGET AUDIENCE: Directors and Senior Leaders

Overview:

This proposed annual theme builds on the 2025 Directors Roundtable focus on resilient research and innovation leadership, integrated institutional practice, and succession planning, while recognising the strategic evolution from a Directors Roundtable to a broader Leadership Forum.

For 2026, the emphasis shifts from resilience as an outcome to leadership self-reflection as a strategic responsibility. Within the SARIMA Leadership Forum context, the central question becomes how university leaders examine their own leadership styles, decision-making habits, transition approaches, and governance choices so that institutions remain stable, adaptive, future-oriented, and trusted.

Across Southern Africa, universities are navigating leadership transitions, financial pressures, digital transformation, policy uncertainty, reputational scrutiny, and growing expectations for relevance and impact. In this environment, the challenge is not only to lead change, but to do so in ways that protect continuity, preserve institutional memory, strengthen systems, and avoid unnecessary disruption.

The proposed theme therefore invites Directors and senior leaders, through the Leadership Forum platform, to explore how steady, values-based, reflective leadership can coexist with agility, innovation, and dynamic institutional reform. It positions the Forum not merely as a closed dialogue among Directors, but as a strategic leadership space for deeper institutional reflection, shared learning, and collective stewardship of sustainable university transitions.
