

Dr Bill Majdalany

United States of America

---

After completing Diagnostic Radiology Residency and Interventional Radiology Fellowship at Brigham and Women's Hospital, his first faculty position was at The Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center.

Two years later, he was recruited to the University of Michigan as the Fellowship Director of Interventional Radiology where he served for five years before recruitment to Emory University.

At Emory University, he served as the Residency Director of Interventional Radiology and as the Site Director for Interventional Radiology at Emory University Hospital, for 4 years, before transitioning to the University of Vermont in 2022.

Currently, he serves as the Chief of Interventional Radiology and as the Vice Chair of Research at the University of Vermont Medical Center, Burlington, VT.

His dominant clinical interests include complex lymphatic, systemic venous, and portal venous disorders as well as hepatobiliary and oncologic interventions.