

Dr David Sweet

Neonatologist in the Regional Neonatal Unit in the Royal Maternity Hospital in Belfast and trained in Paediatrics and Neonatal Medicine in Northern Ireland and Western Australia

David Sweet is a consultant Neonatologist in the Regional Neonatal Unit in the Royal Maternity Hospital in Belfast and trained in Paediatrics and Neonatal Medicine in Northern Ireland and Western Australia.

Dr Sweet has numerous peer reviewed publications and review articles to date, mostly related to newborn respiratory care and the evolution of neonatal bronchopulmonary dysplasia. David is the Northern Ireland Co-ordinator of several multicentre trials and maintains an active interest in Perinatal Research and Evidence-based medicine. He is first author of all 6 editions of the European Guidelines on the Management of RDS. David contributes actively to multicentre trials and collaborative neonatal research networks. He is regularly invited to speak at national and international meetings and is recognised for his commitment to translating research into improved outcomes for vulnerable newborns.

He is also an avid painter in his off-time, raising funds for neonatal services in Malawi.