Cape Town, South Africa

Lloyd Tooke is a neonatologist working at the Groote Schuur Hospital neonatal unit, which is affiliated with the University of Cape Town.

He has special interests in congenital and acquired infections of the newborn, and the care of the preterm infant in resource limited settings. Along with the African Paediatric Fellowship Program he has assisted in training 11 Neonatologists from other parts of Africa who are now practicing in their home countries.

He has published numerous articles and is involved with innovative surfactant research with the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

Life highlights include traveling through Africa in a Land Rover and running after his 3 children. He is looking forward to not having to wear a mask in the not-too-distant future (hopefully).
