

Dr Ashmitha Rajkumar

Cape Town, South Africa

I qualified as a radiologist in 2007, an alumnus of the University of Cape Town and the Radiology Department at Groote Schuur Hospital. Thereafter, in addition to my main role as a solo diagnostic radiologist in the district level adult radiology service, I was also involved in commissioning a new radiology department and writing up provincial guidelines for appropriate imaging in district level hospitals.

In 2016, I joined the radiology department at Red Cross War Memorial Children's Hospital working exclusively in paediatric radiology.

I enjoy all aspects of my work but over the years, have developed a particular interest in non-accidental injury and forensic/post-mortem imaging.

I am currently a member of the group working on "International consensus guidelines for imaging in suspected child physical abuse (IGISPA)" and I am busy with an online mini fellowship in post-mortem imaging via a private company in the UK.

Outside of work, I enjoy yoga, word puzzles, trivia and long walks with my mini schnauzer, Pepper.
