ABOUT THIS SESSION

Join Ofsted's Glenise Burrell, Rebecca Jennings, and Denise Olander for a unique opportunity to ask direct questions about inspections. This open Q&A session offers insight into what inspectors look for and how the inspection process works.

WHY YOU SHOULD ATTEND THIS SESSION

Gain clarity, confidence, and practical understanding of Ofsted inspections by speaking directly with experienced inspectors.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND THIS SESSION

Quality managers, compliance leads, curriculum and delivery managers, and senior leaders responsible for inspection readiness. Ideal for providers seeking to strengthen their approach to Ofsted preparation and gain firsthand insight into inspection expectations.

SPEAKER OVERVIEW

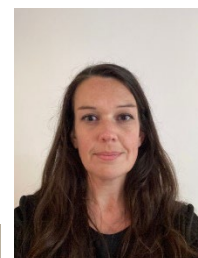

Glenise came to Ofsted with over 25 years of experience in the further education and skills sector, including senior leadership roles across a wide range of curriculum areas in further education colleges and independent learning providers. She has specific expertise in improving the quality of delivery and performance, curriculum planning and organisational management, change and growth.

Denise is a qualified teacher and has a Master's degree in Leadership and Management. Prior to working for Ofsted, Denise gained senior management experience working in large general further education colleges. Her responsibilities included the management of a wide range of college faculties, provision for learners aged 14 to 16, foundation learning, ESOL, children looked after, NEET, adult community and subcontractors and college franchises.

Rebecca is one of His Majesty's Inspectors. Rebecca has worked in various roles in Independent Learning Providers, most recently as Director of Apprenticeships with responsibility for management, curriculum design, quality assurance and learner safeguarding and well-being. Rebecca has experience in apprenticeship delivery in a range of subjects and has previously taught and managed across various youth services contracts. She specialises in Career Guidance and digital skills.

Julie Ashton is one of his Senior His Majesty's Inspectors. Prior to joining Ofsted she had a long career within the further education (FE) sector as a senior leader in a variety of FE colleges. Her last role was that of Deputy Principal in a large FE college.
