

Biography

Stellah Mpagama M.D., MSc. Ph.D. Infectious Diseases is one of the senior fellows of the EDCTP 2, works at Kibong'oto Infectious Diseases Hospital. She has more than 55 publications largely covering diagnosis and treatment of multidrug resistant and drug susceptible Tuberculosis. Currently, she is leading a research portfolio of infectious diseases expanding in other emerging and re-emerging infectious diseases while building capacity for clinical trials and creating the next generation scientists. She is collaborating with other stakeholders to conduct clinical research of both non-communicable and communicable diseases such as Tuberculosis and Diabetes and non-communicable lung diseases such as Bronchiectasis, emphysema. The research covers several designs such as implementations sciences, clinical trials, basic sciences and health systems.