

Dr Tomás López-Peña Ordoñez is Chief of Area on Global Health Research for Development at the National Health Research Institute Carlos III, Spain. He is a medical doctor with a master's degree in epidemiology, public health and international relations. He has extensive experience in international cooperation for health development and global health. Over the past ten years his focus is on the global health research response to poverty-related diseases and neglected populations. He represents Spain in different intergovernmental organizations in the field of global and international health, including as a General Assembly Member of the EDCTP Association.