Liability

BGCS 2027 shall not be held liable, either directly or indirectly, for any issue arising within the framework of the conference or its organisation. This exclusion applies in relation to the organisers and to third parties—including airlines, hotels, transport providers and taxi services—when performing duties or services directly or indirectly connected with the conference.

This exclusion of contractual liability also applies where an event of force majeure disrupts, partially cancels or completely cancels the conference programme for reasons not attributable to BGCS 2027. For these purposes, an event of force majeure is an unforeseen and exceptional event, including a climatic, environmental, political or socio-economic event, without limitation.

The delegate expressly agrees to release BGCS 2027 from responsibility and liability for travel insurance and any related costs or claims. Each delegate is solely responsible for obtaining the insurance necessary for their travel and for pursuing any claim independently against a third party responsible for direct or indirect loss or damage suffered while travelling to or from the conference.

Data Protection Act 1998/2003

Personal data collected for the BGCS Annual Scientific Meeting 2027 will be used only for purposes connected with the meeting.

Validity of Passports and Visa Application

You are responsible for ensuring that your passport is valid for travel. Check the applicable requirements with your local embassy, as some countries require passports to remain valid for up to three months after the date of return.

In the event of your visa being denied, refunds will only be given in line with our cancellation terms.
